President's Comments:

On June 13, our five EAA #1240 Ground School scholarship students met with their instructor, Shira Ellsworth, for the first session of ground school. Over the summer, the class met weekly, and as of now, have had fourteen classes. In between the classes, many, many hours were spent by the students reviewing their work, and previewing the next lesson. Instructors Shira Ellsworth and Jeremy Regeon reviewed their work, and provided explanations for the students questions

At this point, all five students are reviewing the subjects that they have studied, and are taking (and re-taking) sample FAA written exams. Our instructors review their test scores, find the areas that need to be reviewed individually, and review them.

When the student and the instructors feel that the student is ready, the FAA exam will be scheduled. We feel confident that the students will be ready soon, and we look forward to being able to announce the good news.

Dale

Our 5 Ground School Scholarship recipients have kept pace with all of the training modules. They are nearly finished with the formal training phase and have now entered into a review and monitored testing period in preparing for their formal FAA examinations. We have sent evaluation surveys to the students and early responses are indicating that they are well pleased with all aspects of the training they have been provided. As soon as Shira gives them the green light the Chapter will get the students scheduled for their examinations. We will keep you updated.
