FROM THE PRESIDENT

By Dr. John Wisdom

"Stop doing Flight Reviews and add a few ratings!"

We are required to do a flight review every 24 months to keep flying, right? Well that is not entirely true! You can do a flight review with a CFI to keep flying for another 24 months or you could do something much more fun: add a new rating. I know you are thinking, I hate check-rides! What if I tell you there is a way around that as well? Ok, I'm getting creative on this one but stay with me. Adding an endorsement (tailwheel, complex, high performance, high altitude, etc.) doesn't require a check-ride but it does take enough flight time to meet the requirements of a flight review and you will have a lot more fun learning something new while showing the CFI you know enough to get that flight review sign-off at the same time as the new endorsement. So decide on that new rating or endorsement you would like to add and get to having fun learning and flying something new. Even us CFIs have to have a flight review but there are ratings to add. I'm working on glider; what sounds fun to you?

We have a fun summer coming up with a lot of chapter events. I look forward to seeing you all soon.

John
