Ray Scholar receives Solo Endorsement

Congratulations Bryson! For reaching the milestone of solo. And what a day to do it on with decent crosswinds and gusty conditions. Ron got some videos of the landings and they looked really smooth. With this step completed his next milestone will be getting his written test finished by December.

Make sure to swing by the Clubhouse for Tuesdays Meeting To congratulate Bryson in person! Dave is planning on having Chicken dinner and dessert so come Hungry!

WHAT HAVE OUR CLUB MEMBERS BEEN UP BEEN UP TO?

Top left, Bryson returns from solo flight unscathed “cheated death once again” as my flight instructor was fond of saying ;)

Bottom right and left, Joe, Dustin, Leah and I meeting up in the air to help rock Issac to sleep

"I'll begin today's proceedings by saying that we have enough food and water to last us until some sort of eventual turnaround."

VMC Question October

Question: Pilots are often taught to not lean the mixture of a normally aspirated engine below 3,000 feet. When departing an airport when the density altitude is 5,000 feet, should we wait until reaching 3,000 AGL before leaning the engine?

(More info on this and other types of operations can be found on the manual the club bought and has in the clubhouse. Look at pg. 32)
