Good News for Experimental Accident Totals

September 30 marked the end of the FAA’s fiscal year and with it, the annual conclusion of the annual 12-month tracking of fatal accidents among experimental category aircraft. The preliminary numbers from the agency received late last week appear to present an excellent snapshot of safety over the past year.

While the final totals are still being tabulated, the initial total of 37 accidents is well below the FAA's not-to-exceed figure of 46 for the period. That includes 29 fatal accidents in homebuilt aircraft. More details will be available in the coming weeks as the FAA's annual total of GA activity is compiled. These figures also mirror what appears to be an improved year for overall general aviation safety, even as total flight hours have increased.

"FAA officials have taken notice of these improved safety figures," said Sean Elliott, EAA's vice president of advocacy and safety. "Agency officials have remarked to us how EAA's programs have helped build the safety culture that leads to these positive numbers."

Among the EAA programs that are focused on aviation safety, especially in amateur-built aircraft, are the longstanding Technical Counselor and Flight Advisor programs, and resources such as the EAA Flight Test Manual that is about to publish its updated second edition. EAA also works with the FAA to establish safety-minded opportunities, such as the second safety pilot allowance for homebuilt flight testing.

FAA Publishes Rule Removing CFI Certificate Expiration Dates

The FAA has published a final rule removing the expiration date on flight instructor certificates and replacing it with recent experience requirements. The rule, titled "Removal of Expiration Date on a Flight Instructor Certificate; Additional Qualification Requirements to Train Initial Flight Instructor Applicants; and other Provisions" was initially proposed in the spring of 2023.

The final rule changes the 24-month expiration date on flight instructor certificates to a recent experience requirement of 24 months, similar to other pilot certificates. This results in flight instructor certificates no longer being reissued when renewed. Instead, instructors will need to maintain and demonstrate recency in order to instruct. The final rule provides that each of the five existing methods for renewing a flight instructor certificate are now methods for demonstrating recency. The FAA has also provided an additional method for demonstrating recency, completing, and instructing in an FAA-sponsored pilot proficiency program (WINGS Program).

The FAA will continue to require flight instructors to submit an airman certificate and/or rating application (FAA Form 8710-1 or 8710-11) and associated documentation to the FAA upon completing the recent experience requirements. The final rule states, "(w)hile the flight instructor will not be applying to renew a certificate, using FAA Forms 8710-1 and 8710-11 to collect data is necessary to maintain an accurate record of flight instructors who are eligible to exercise their privileges. This process also supports the FAA's ability to provide necessary data to governmental offices and industry upon request."

Also important for flight instructors, with this final rule, the FAA is also allowing an instructor whose recent experience has lapsed by no more than three months to reinstate their privileges by taking an approved flight instructor refresher course (FIRC) rather than completing a practical test as currently required.

The final rule becomes effective December 1, 2024, and the FAA estimates the cost savings to be $5.6 million, discounted over five years.

FAA Issues Stay on Misguided Legal Interpretation

The FAA has informed industry organizations that it is issuing a stay of its recently issued Moss letter of interpretation. In a letter dated October 15, 2024, the FAA responded to industry requests and "...is issuing a stay of the Legal Interpretation of 14 CFR § 43.3(d) dated September 3, 2024, while the Agency reviews its policies and regulatory options." The Agency goes on to say that, "This stay does not represent a conclusion on the contents of that interpretation and will be effective until such time as the Agency issues new or supplemental guidance."

EAA had joined with 15 other general aviation organizations in a letter asking the FAA to suspend a recently issued legal interpretation, known as the "Moss Interpretation," and engage with industry on potential solutions. The interpretation addresses the application of the terminology in 14 CFR 43.3(d), which significantly changes the industry practice of supervising maintenance trainees, shop apprentices, and aircraft owners working on aircraft.

The rule, whose original language predates the founding of the FAA in 1958, states the following:

A person working under the supervision of a holder of a mechanic or repairman certificate may perform the maintenance, preventive maintenance, and alterations that his supervisor is authorized to perform, if the supervisor personally observes the work being done to the extent necessary to ensure that it is being done properly and if the supervisor is readily available, in person, for consultation. [...]

"Readily available, in person" has been applied in a variety of ways in practice over the past few decades by the maintenance community, especially since the regulation also contains the qualifier "to the extent necessary to ensure that it is being done properly." That ensures that the work meets quality standards that can be signed off by the certificated supervisor who is overseeing the work. This has included the recent rise of electronic video communication that enables effective remote supervision in the modern maintenance shop.

In 2022, a Flight Standards District Office requested a legal interpretation on the ability to use remote means to provide remote supervision. The FAA's Office of the Chief Counsel (AGC) offers a very broad interpretation in response, including the statement "The certificated mechanic must be available, not just to answer questions, but to notice mistakes and take over if necessary." This, coupled with the initial question asking about the term "in person," appears to require the person supervising the maintenance to be physically present at all times. This is different from the decades-long industry practice and understanding.

The industry letter that EAA joined highlights the industry's concern that the FAA's interpretation "goes beyond the simple questions asked" and "...is contrary to the plain language of the regulation..."

If not rescinded or amended, this interpretation will have long-lasting negative effects on all aspects of the aviation industry. This interpretation is an example of an interpretation, enforcement, or litigation from the agency that significantly disrupts operational practice and requires years of work from other FAA departments to correct – work that does little to increase safety and efficiency in the national airspace system.

Now more than 2.4 million Young Eagles!

A very active summer of Young Eagles flights has pushed the total number of young people flown past 2.4 million, the latest milestone in what has become the world's largest youth aviation education program.

"It's been great to see Young Eagles activity return to pre-pandemic levels," said David Leiting, EAA's Eagles Program manager. "As we headed into the always-active fall flight rally period, our volunteer pilots had already flown more than 38,000 Young Eagles in 2024, and we've welcomed more than 700 new pilots into the program this year. We thank all our pilots and ground support volunteers, who are planting those seeds with young people that will keep aviation vibrant for years to come."

This year has also been a noteworthy one for many other reasons. NFL All-Pro tight end Jimmy Graham, an active Young Eagles pilot, moved from the program co-chair position to Young Eagles chairmanship during EAA AirVenture Oshkosh 2024. He succeeds air show legend Sean D. Tucker, who did tremendous work for the program during his decade as chairman.

In addition, the Sporty's Learn to Fly Course available at no charge to all Young Eagles has expanded its offerings for those who want to take the next step. EAA's growing AeroEducate program also provides online resources for Young Eagles of all levels who want to explore more about the world of flight – again at no charge.

The majority of Young Eagles flights take place through EAA's chapter network, but whether it's through a chapter or individual flights, we encourage all EAA members to participate in building the next generation of aviators. To find out how you can get involved, go to EAA.org/YoungEagles.

Phillips 66 is the presenting sponsor of Young Eagles, while Sporty's and Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University are the official sponsors of the Young Eagles Flight Plan. Young Eagles is also supported by United Aviate, Garmin, Lightspeed, Global Aerospace, and the Academy of Model Aeronautics.

The WACO Aircraft Company was the largest manufacturer of civil aircraft in the country in the late 1920's and early 30's and this museum is dedicated to the plant and the employees that made it great.

With the help of the WACO Historical Society (founded in 1978) members and many generous donors and supporters, Historic WACO Field opened in 1997. The field consists of a 77-acre site and features a 2200-foot runway (2000 feet usable) south of Troy, Ohio. Historic WACO Field is maintained by WACO volunteers and is constantly receiving upgrades and improvements, but we are always in need of additional volunteers to assist in the upkeep of the site.

CFIs Face New TSA Requirement

Policy change goes into effect November 1.

CFIs who are actively engaged in flight training will soon be required to have a Transportation Security Administration provider account.

In the past, this requirement only applied for training providers who provided instruction for non-U.S. citizen students. This change becomes effective when interim rule 14 CFR 1552 becomes a final rule November 1.

Under the new regulation, flight training providers must hold an FAA certificate and obtain and use a Flight Training Security Program (FTSP) portal account. The new rule also stipulates that refresher TSA security awareness training, which was required annually, will now be required every 24 months.

If you have pictures of your events and would like to share them, please send them to me along with a write-up! Let others know what you are doing.

This newsletter goes out to the EAA Chapters in Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia, Kentucky, Michigan, and Pennsylvania. It also goes out to the FBO's in those states. So, if you are planning to host an event and would like to get the information out there, this is one of the places to do so. There is NO cost to advertise your events or your Airport Restaurant.

We would like to put your events or happenings in the Ohio Region Chapter Newsletter. So please feel free to get the article to me about a week before the end of the month. This way it can be included in the following month's newsletter. If you have an interesting story you want to share, send it.

If someone from your Chapter, or on the airfield has a plane, parts, or tools they want to sell or give away let us know. It can be included in the newsletter. There is NO cost for this.

Please share this with your fellow Chapter members, aviator friends and your local FBO's. You never know who would be interested in one of the articles/events in the newsletter. Or if you received this from a friend and would like to receive it directly, please let me know.

Send in your comments as to what you would like to see in the newsletter. We like those human-interest stories, especially those with pictures.

Send articles for the November newsletter to me by November 20th if possible. Email them to Daford1957@gmail.com

Thanks again and enjoy the newsletter.
