Member Moment

It took a lot to get where I am now. I started off as a 14-year-old with a blooming interest in aviation, and now I'm a 17-year-old who just soloed and has a burning passion for aviation. Over these past few years, I've been hit with a few roadblocks, and as I conquered those roadblocks I created a motto of "I've come this far and worked this hard, I'm not giving up now and having it all be for nothing." This has gotten me pretty far, I didn't give up when I was hit with the challenge of my mom dying, and I didn't give up when I had to wait 6 months for medical, I didn't give up. That is my advice for everyone, it doesn't really matter how hard something is, don't give up, if its something you truly love, all the hardship is worth it. My hardships and challenges were worth it, and they will continue to be worth it, as I will never give up and will continue to improve
