Editorial Notes by Larry Gordon

We Can't Always Stay Longer

Slowly our hours of sunlight are diminishing for the next three months, until the winter solstice on December 21st. We will be losing over 4 hrs until then. As it is, my flight time in the evenings is too short to begin heating up the oil in the Rotax and expect to fly out of the pattern in time to still see the sun up! The only way to even do that during the later days of August, and still have dinner, was to fly out for the weekly WI Hamburger Social in your branch. That is probably why those final fly-outs on the calendar were pretty well attended. Hopefully, the shorter hours of daylight this meteorological fall will be clear, crisp, calm, and colorful, so that I can play catch up for the lack of tach time that I put on this summer.

ArkanSTOL 2022

If you are still looking for a fall flying adventure, I just received a notice that the ArkanSTOL 2022 Ozark Challenge will be taking place at Byrd's Adventure Center, Sept 28 - Oct 2nd, in the beautiful Ozark Mountains. Last year's event was attended by Chapter UL 75 members Steve Krueger, Dan Marlenga, Paul Buss, Lyle Banser, and myself. It was a memorable experience, as well as a scenic aviation adventure. More information and volunteer applications can be found at arkanstol.com, as well as the Ozark adventure article in the Chapter 75 Oct. 2021 newsletter.

I used to say that "I'm smarter today, than I was yesterday", but I'm not sure that it is still true. Growing up, we always assumed that the first day of fall was Sept. 21st, and the 1st day of spring was always March 21st. As a kid, I could have put money where my mouth was, and come out a winner! Now I will have to consult the internet, or The Farmers' Almanac for the September start to the autumn solar equinox, or know that fall starts the 21st of September 2092 and 2096. Ta' hell! A changing world can leave us drowning in information that may or may not be pertinent to our purpose, correct or not, perhaps never to be used, leave us more baffled than when we began our search, or it can become the key to the puzzle. There may be differences in the details, but of necessity? Not necessarily. So, do we lose sleep over when meteorological fall starts, or that the fall equinox begins Thursday, September 22, 2022 at 8:04 p.m., CDT? I think I need a break to reset my buttons in the "big blue yonder" and make sure I'm on the ground before the streetlights come on!

Fly Night 2022 Wrap Up

We had a few cancellations this year due to bad weather or high winds. The fly nights that went off without a hitch, drew a good number of aircraft and other vehicles.

I'd like to thank all that hosted our gatherings and those who were able to fly/drive and attend. It's always a good time and all had safe flights.

Now is a good time to volunteer to host for the 2023 season. We meet the first and third Tuesday of June, July and August. The first Tuesday in June and first Tuesday in August are spoken for, the other dates are wide open. If interested in hosting, please text me at 715 891 7213 or send an email to: flyguy963@gmx.com
