Spring On The Cusp?

There is nothing like a long drawn out spring like we are having this year. With Wausau having 179 sunless days per year on average, it seems like we are fast approaching that total already. My brother has recently moved back to Wisconsin, after having lived out of state for 50 years. He is embracing this weather by equating it as being a typical Wisconsin winter. Just due to the fact that he and I grew up in Sheboygan County, I can see how he comes to that conclusion. When central Wisconsin is enjoying one of its beautiful 186 days of sunshine, Sheboygan is experiencing a 20 degree cooler and moisture laden breeze off Lake Michigan. Hey brother Gordy, remember watching 4th of July fireworks sandwiched between giant cotton batting sleeping bags?! Oh well, I guess I will continue my daily yard patrol, inspecting peach and blueberry buds for them to show hints of blooming.

N192VT Ready For Takeoff

Last week Thursday, April 28th, I flew 13 miles from Wild Rose to Waupaca for 192VT to have its annual inspection. It was a less than favorable day to be flying, but the 20 minute flight was spectacular! On startup, the 912 UL snapped to life with a turn of the ignition key and was smoothly humming at 2,000 rpm as I pushed in the choke. The oil pressure gauge came to life and settled into the green. Going through the post startup checklist items was making me increasingly anxious to be airborne. Starting my taxi to Rwy 09 had me on the edge of my seat for two reasons: checking the grass duff line from plowing winter snow in search of a missing tire chain off the plow truck, and secondly, I had been waiting too long since last having enjoyed the aerial perspective of flight. Stopping to observe the windsock reaffirmed the local AWOS report before announcing my intentions on 122.8. Not wanting to share the thrill of flying with others at the moment, I was pleased to not hear a response to my initiating my backtaxing to Rwy 09. Completing the back taxi, oil and water temps were coming up. The engine run up for the mag check was smooth, as were the final checklist items prior to takeoff. A check for traffic approaching the runway and the announcement, "1 -9'er-2- Victor-Tango departing Rwy 09", brought out the grin of excitement on my face as the acceleration of the plane lifted the weighty thoughts from my mind.

Touch Down

The flight seemed to proceed in slow motion without any time restraints. There was zero radio chatter and the smooth air only enhanced the feeling of being alone and floating. Having received my tailwheel endorsement at KPCZ, I felt right at home with the wind favoring the right hand traffic of Rwy 10. I was greeted by the long concrete runway on final and continued the "float" above its surface. Without hardly realizing it or hearing the tires chirp on touch down, the plane was down and ready to be taxied to the ramp.

Ah, the wonders of flight!
